

SOCIALIST'S WORK TOLD BY PRIVATE

MEMBER OF SOCIALIST PARTY FIRST GOVERN-MENT WITNESS IN
BERGER TRIAL.

TRIED FOR DESERTION

Was Absent Without Leave For Fourteen Days But Was Exonerated of Desertion Charge.

Chicago, Dec. 13.—When the trial of Congress-man elect Victor L. Berger of Milwaukee and his co-defendants accused of conspiracy to subvert the espionage act, was resumed today, Private Arnold Shiller, continued his testimony regarding his relations with the defendants in efforts toward defeating the nation's war plans. The soldier is now in the depot brigade at

September 20, 1917, first as infantryman, later as artilleryman, and finally in his present position as sergeant.

Is Chicagoan.

Private Shiller is a Chicagoan who worked for months in the headquarters of the national socialist party and was sent to the United States by Harry Basler, now in an internment camp and who is reputed to have admitted that he had been a member of the party. The only witness thus far placed on the stand, the soldier told of his plans to install the anti-war spirit in soldiers and sailors and to organize a "underground railway to Mexico" for deserters, of the operations of "a code system" objected to by the government, of the existence of an organized conspiracy to oppose the conscription act and a code system for transmission of messages between the allied plotters.

Schiller's Testimony.

It was expected that the testimony of Schiller's testimony would consume the greater portion of today's sitting of the court.

Direct examination of Private Arnold A. Schiller, soldier at Camp Grant, former socialist and the first government witness, was resumed.

...American socialist, edited by Wm. F. Kruse, one of the defendants, was questioned by assistant District Attorney Joseph B. Fleming. The witness said that he bought a map of Texas in preparation for a trip to Texas and that the map was obtained by the witness as a "German agent"

Was Questioned.
The witness said that before he reported for service W. F. Kruse asked him whether he would refuse to report for military service if other would also refuse. Discussing a visit to the

"I had on my uniform and Mr. Gormier jokingly remarked 'has one of the 200,00 coffins the government has ordered been measured up for you?'"

Schiller described a motto of the girls of the Young People's Socialist League which read:

"The hand that holds a musket can

"Mr. Kruse showed the motto to me," he said, "and I saw it at Camp Yipsel, Fox Lake, Ill."

Reduced to Rank.

The witness said he was tried at Camp Grant for desertion, having been absent without leave for 18 days.

"I was found not guilty of desertion, but was reduced to the rank and promoted on two-thirds pay for five months," he said.

The war picture entitled "The Realities of War" depicting the horrors of strife was identified by the witness as having been on the walls of the su-

Excerpts From Bulletin
Excerpts from the bulletin of June 1917 which pamphlet the witness said was given to him in the presence of Victor L. Berger in the socialist headquarters were read by Mr. Fleming to the jury. One of the excerpts was labelled advertisement and read: "Buy Liberty Bonds and U. S. Savings Bonds. The

The defense said, "The court room was again crowded, a large portion of the audience being women. One woman wore a red dress and many of the men red neckties."

Cross examination of the first government witness in the trial of Victor L. Berger and four other socialist leaders for conspiracy to violate the espionage act, took up many angles but was principally concerned with the memory of the soldier witness, Arnold Schiller.

He told of several visits to Chicago socialist headquarters but denied that Wm. F. Kruse and Adolph Gormer, two of the defendants had told him he was foolish and should hurry back to camp because he had over stayed his leave of absence.

young peoples socialist league circles and that he had called Kruse "yellow" because Kruse would not appoint a secret committee to oppose the draft. Just before adjournment of the morning session, it became known that Judge Landis had received a letter threatening him with death and containing abusive threats against the President and fulminations against

FEDERATED TRADES COUNCIL IS REVIVED

Union organizations of the city revived the federated trades council at a meeting held in Carpenter's hall, at south Main street, last night. Representatives were present from the following unions: Cigar makers, Railway Clerks and Freight Handlers, Electricians, Railway Mechanics, Carpenters, Railway Maintenance of Way.

A temporary chairman and secretary were elected. A meeting will be held the first Monday in January, when the organization will be perfected. Other unions including musicians, plumbers, bricklayers and masons and stationary engineers will send delegates to this meeting.

An open meeting of all workmen has been called for tonight at Carpenter's hall. Paul Hynbright, official of the International Machinists' Association and W. E. Forrest, organizer of the State Federation of Labor, will address the meeting.

EMPLOYMENT AGENTS IN MANY ARMY CAMPS

Representatives of the United States Employment Service now are stationed in approximately 60 army camps and cantonments in this country to furnish information to enlisted men as to employment after discharge. The agents are today to these representatives state that as each soldier goes through the discharge procedure, he is asked if he wishes to have assistance in finding work.

The agents are now being established in every city and town in the country.

Each man desiring such assistance will be filled out for him a card, showing his name, the town at which he expects to apply for assistance, the kind of position wanted and such other information as the agent may require. Wherever possible, the name of his last employer also is to be included. When filled out, the representatives of the Federal Employment Service will sort the cards by States and mail them to the Federal Director of the Employment Service for the states in which the men intend to apply. Soldiers also are to be given all possible assistance in finding work after returning soldiers are ready to advise them on questions which will confront them on their return.

The camp representatives of the Employment Service also were instructed today to wire the Federal Directors for the states when any large number of men are being discharged for their own, giving the number who will apply for assistance, the predominating kinds of occupations sought, the approximate time of arrival and the important points in the states to which large numbers are going.

Reports reaching the Department of Labor show that in many camps, the camp commanders already are giving all possible assistance to the representatives of the Employment Service by means of movies, posters, and pamphlets. The Adjutant general of the War Department has issued an order to camp commanders authorizing them to furnish the representatives of the Federal Employment Service with quarters and office space when necessary.

Two physicians stated that the boy died of exposure.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY MEETING THURSDAY

An interesting paper was read yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the Missionary Society of the Congregational Missionary society. The paper was read by Rev. J. W. Hill, which took up the golden jubilee meeting of the W. B. M. L. which was held last week in Oak Park. The conference lasted most of the week and embraced meetings, luncheons and other affairs. A paper was given one evening in Orchestra hall, Chicago, in which about two hundred people took part. It was called "Daybreak" and depicted scenes from events in foreign lands. Reports of delegates showed that over three million dollars had been raised for missionary work in this department of the interior since it started fifty years ago. Seventeen states are included in this branch of work, and of these Ohio was the pioneer state. Wisconsin had attained two points in the contest. Only three presidents of the board have served, all of them having long terms. Missionaries from Constantinople, Bulgaria, Kobe, and from China were present and gave addresses. The object set for this golden jubilee had been 250,000 dollars raised and fifty new missionaries pledged to carry on the work. After the talk by Mrs. Jeffris a supper was served at five o'clock.

POSTER EXHIBITION IS MOST UNIQUE AFFAIR

Foreign posters as well as those of American origin are on display at Library hall today. Some of the best talent in the country has given its services to the making of these posters, and they are well worthy of time and study. A program will be given this evening, which will prove very enjoyable. Miss Evelyn Welch will give a reading, and a young lady from the School for the Blind will read an original poem. Other attractive features have been promised. The committee, headed by Miss Charlotte Prichard, have promised to provide for a French orphan, and the affair is given by the League to provide funds for that purpose. The funds of the league cannot be used except for purposes of art, and so are not available for providing for an orphan.

TAX INCREASE FOR ALL INCOMES NOTED

Madison, Dec. 13.—An increase in individual income taxes by 600 for the past year was reported by the state tax commission in its final tabulation tables today. The total income tax assessed against individuals for 1918, for collection in 1919, was $2,755,780.83 as compared with $2,125,539.26 for the year previous. The total tax to be collected from corporations on this year's assessment is announced as $2,074,381.73. The total of individual and corporation taxes is $4,830,162.56. This is over $2,000,000 greater than the total income tax assessed last year, which was $2,832,595.66.

Approximately 40 percent of the income tax will be collected in Milwaukee. The total income tax assessment there is $4,841,824.00. The smallest income tax is assessed in Adams county, where the totals is only $911.68. The total tax collected in Milwaukee county is larger than the entire income tax for any one year of the first four years that the law was in operation. The income tax is collected in January. Under the terms of the law 10 per cent is retained by the state, which pays the entire collection assessment, 20 per cent goes to the county, and 70 per cent goes to the locality in which the property or individual assessed is located. Some of the large total assessments are: Sheboygan county $2,440,372.89; Winnebago $2,388,899.07; Ashland $1,000,177.53; Bayfield $1,423,831; Dane $821,689.78; Eau Claire $189,812.23; Fond du Lac $120,019.00; La Crosse $185,853.65; Outagamie $322,573.85; Rock $281,008.65; Racine $709,565.81; and Brown $233,860.87.

Offered Position.
Madison—Rev. Howell Davies has been tendered the position of state superintendent of the Wisconsin Congregational churches, the place formerly held by Rev. J. J. Keller, now in other work in Georgia. Mr. Davies is the pastor of the Congregational church at Wauwatosa.

EX-SOLDIERS FAIL TO SECURE DEMON RUM

Five Discharged Soldiers From Camp Grant Arrested Yesterday When They Don Overalls Over Khaki.

Evidently of the same opinion as the soldiers arrested on Thursday, five soldiers from Camp Grant donned overalls late yesterday afternoon and attempted to secure liquor from the Williams saloon at the corner of West Milwaukee and Academy street.

The men arrived in Janesville on the four o'clock car and attracted the attention of the police by their mysterious actions. They were followed and were seen donning the blue suits over their khaki. They strutted around for a while to see if anyone would suspect them and thinking the coast clear they walked boldly in and up to the bar of the Williams saloon.

When asked by the bartender what they desired they all wanted liquor. They failed to get it, however, as the bartender was careful and suspected them. About that time the door opened and two officers entered.

The men were taken to the station and each one questioned. They assumed the air of one being persecuted and refused to talk, except to say they had been discharged and were on their way home.

They were held at the police station and released as their trains were due to take them to their homes.

MORE BILLIONS NEEDED.

Secretary McAdoo insists that we need more billions in loans before we can consider ourselves "out of the woods," and he proposes to start the bill rolling before the nation's financial crisis is over. He has talked and thought in billions so long it will be hard to get down and discuss millions in the next decade or so, and from the present indications we will not have a chance to. Meanwhile he is ready for the next billion loan.

RAILROAD CONTROL.

President Wilson stated to congress in his annual message the day before he sailed for Europe, that he did not know how to solve the railroad problem, but even before he has landed Secretary McAdoo, his son-in-law, and possibly his closest cabinet confident, states that government control should be maintained for the next five years. "It is a matter of life and death," that is, the republican side of both houses—rose on their hind feet and howled disapproval, but their howls did not count for anything if, when Wilson gets back, he thinks the plan is wise one. It will be "went and did."

THE LAW.

Whenever there is a law passed prohibiting certain privileges for individuals then the general public seems to help this class of citizens to obviate it. The use of civilian clothes, of overalls and caps, to obtain under the enlisted men of the national army, was and by the officers as well, is to be condemned. Men who furnish these soldiers, even if they have their discharge papers in their pocket, are liable to federal prosecution for violating the laws. Not the individual will suffer, but the whole community, if this continues. Meanwhile remember the uniform of the United States government absolutely prohibits a soldier or sailor from purchasing liquor, and unless the local citizens understand this and see it enforced, then the federal authorities will be appealed to. Think it over.

FRIDAY THE 13TH.

Today is Friday the 13th. Those who are superstitious, and those who black out, that crosses their path, decide this combination, but evidently President Wilson considers it a good luck day for he planned his arrival in France so that he stepped onto French soil this morning amid the plaudits of the assembled dignitaries who had assembled to meet him. For the first forty-eight hours he is in Paris he will be the official guest of the nation, and then he will again be a plain American citizen, sovereign of all creation, and can go about his own private business. That is the way the entertainers have suggested it be arranged, and doubtless that is the way it will be carried out. For French always insist upon punctuality of all formalities and the understanding, so Friday the 13th is not unlucky after all, and marks a new epoch in the history of the world when an American president lands on foreign soil and is still acting president of the country he left behind.

UP AND DOING.

There is always fire where there is smoke. The new "Theater of Conscience" is up and doing every minute, this affair, that affair, all over the proper attention and results that will count are being obtained. The reaction after the strenuous war period means much development along every line of industry, and Janesville is preparing itself to take advantage of the situation.

The Wall Street Journal now mentions Janesville, Wisconsin, always careful to spell out the name of the state to prevent confusion, in discussing motor stocks. This has attracted the eyes of the financial world to the city more than dozens of page advertisements could possibly have done, and the great beauty of the whole affair is that the General Motors selected Janesville without being asked to, or Janesville knowing anything about it.

Already extensive changes have been suggested in civic matters and more are to follow. Janesville is up and doing and its business men realize it and are planning for the future.
There is going to be a "boys get back"
for there will be places for all and new activities to attract others to come here to become citizens.

The council has taken the right steps at the right time in suggesting a uniform system of road building, and later on will take up building instructions and the department increased responsibilities, schools and other matters most essential in transforming a city of second class into one of the first class at one full swoop.
Much depends upon the council, and they understand the responsibility that rests on their shoulders and are planning to act accordingly.

"Your Share Is Fair" has covered a multitude of sins and short-comings and those who failed to take advantage of this opportunity to demonstrate their loyalty may flatter themselves that their names are after-effects when their names are made public and the boys who offer themselves as sacrifices, if need be, return home they will not feel easy, and perhaps the aftereffect will be even more than the present effect.

Now for the membership campaign for the Red Cross. No one who has failed to appreciate what the American Red Cross has meant, means today, and will mean for the years to come, to this world of ours, can consider themselves up to date and acquainted with the real facts of modern civilization. Everyone should be a member just to show the people on the other side of the Atlantic how loyal we are.

Those joyful letters that come to our soldiers' boys' mothers—and guardians and sweethearts that are dated after the peace armistice had been signed are surely appreciated.
No one but those looking for the letters can realize what they have meant.

Did you realize that Christmas is but eleven days off? If so, what plans have you made for giving someone else joy and happiness on this great day, greater this year than ever before since the first Christmas in the lowly manger in Bethlehem?

Our boys are coming back to us from over there, many crippled and worn by disease and wounds and others will remain on the French soil
they redeemed with their life blood, and yet we hear the cry of "Kamerad!" "Food or we starve."

The boys who served in the vast army raised and were forced to remain in this country to help prepare others for the work ahead of them, will be honored with silver chevrons
instead of the golden ones, denoting foreign service.

That Berger trial in Chicago is attracting world-wide attention, for not only are the men on trial, but the whole fundamental system of socialism is being disclosed to the very core.

Who said that they would go,
And thereby got their names in print,
From Maine to Idaho,

So swift and sure and long,

And seven times as strong.

For what is this we learn?

Fashions in Humor.
A lady, once suggested "Alice in Wonderland" to a steadily-going matron. The volume was soon returned with thanks and with the explanation that what was wanted was something "light," not all those puzzles. Unquestionably, there are fashions in humor.

The True and the False.
The president of a bank, when asked by a young clerk how he could distinguish the counterfeit bills from the good, said: "Get familiar with the good bills, and you will recognize the bad bills at sight." Here is a vast volume of general wisdom summed up in a single sentence.—Christian Herald.

Plow Evolved Slowly.
The plow evolved slowly from a crude instrument of wood into the steel tool of today. In many parts of the world even today a very primitive form of wooden plow is still in use.

ton steamed near the harbor at East
France, the first welcome President Wilson and the rest of the peace delegation party will receive will come from the signal flags of the U. S. sailors laid on shore at the harbor. They will wigwag a greeting to the president and sharp-eyed ads with telescopes on board the ship will receive the message and convey it to Wilson.

Had One Requisite.
Janitor was fond of the neckties belonging to his big brother and, bringing me a bright-colored one, asked me to tie it on for him. He was wearing a low collared middie blouse, so I told him I couldn't tie it on and he yelled out, "Well, I got a neck, haven't I?"
Chicago Tribune.

Wonderful Giant Squid.
The giant squid is the largest animal in point of length that exists or ever did exist. It destroys its prey by en-folding it in its huge sucklelike arms, while it blackens and poisons the water with its inky fluid. It is a relative of the octopus, which is also furnished with arms, but the latter creature is smaller and considerably different in structure.

Your Own Way.
Many have an idea that it would be pleasant always to have their own way. It is sometimes pleasant, but the results are not gratifying. It is the road that leads to temptation and bondage of sin.

Would Return It.
It was a very hot day and the kind-hearted fireman had given a little girl a piece of ice. A newsboy asked her for it, but she refused to give it up.
"Aw shucks!" said the boy. "I'll give it back to you—I only want the juice out of it."—Boston Transcript.

Surely Not Bump of Knowledge.
O'Brien met Flanagan and noticed
he had a big bump on his forehead.
"Hello," said O'Brien, "is that a bump of knowledge?" "Indeed, it's not," said Flanagan. "It's a bump of ignorance of knowing nothing about boxing."

A FORMER STUDENT OF INSTITUTE FOR BLIND SWEARS OUT WARRANT

On November 23, Edward Fitzpatrick, of Watertown and twelve other students at the Wisconsin Institute for the Blind, filed with the State Board of Control, complaints and allegations against Junius Hooper, superintendent of the school. The complaints alleged many unusual conditions and on Wednesday of the present week the entire State Board of Control, spent the day at the school and made a thorough investigation.

Fitzpatrick and the other twelve boys finally broke down in their story and the outcome was that Mr. Hooper was exonerated and that the entire thirteen were ordered dismissed from the school by the vote of the board and the order signed by James O. Davidson, president; Laura B.
Breese, E. A. Everett, George B. Harris and W. H. Graebner of the board and M. J. Tappan. In fact the order of expulsion went into effect at once and some of the boys were ordered to leave Wednesday night and did so and in other, with the exception of Fitzpatrick and one companion, Edward J. Ryan, who remained at the school.

The two boys had been ordered to be ready for the 11:30 train Tuesday but failed to comply with the order and entered the dining room with the rest of the pupils as usual. Mr. Hooper decided to permit them to remain until after the meal hour and they ate the dinner. On finishing Fitzpatrick who is blind entirely, approached one of the waitresses and began talking to her, this being one of the most flagrant violations of the school and Mr. Hooper immediately took him by the arm to lead him from the room.

Fitzpatrick resisted, it is alleged, struck Mr. Hooper and in return, it is alleged was shoved and struck in return by the superintendent who ordered him from the room. He again resisted and at this time Miss Marjorie Seaton, matron of the school and a sister-in-law of Mr. Hooper, whose name had been brought into prominence by Fitzpatrick and his companions, arrived on the scene and the complaints were filed at the existing pupil with a sewing bag. Other students then helped eject the two boys from the room.

The morning Fitzpatrick had a warrant charging Hooper and Miss Seaton with assault and battery and they appeared in Judge Maxfield's court. Edward J. Ryan appeared upon a jury trial and December 19th was set by the court.

As superintendent of the school Mr.
Hooper has peculiar police powers over his charges and he was simply carrying out the orders of the board which had ordered the expulsion of the thirteen boys.

THREE DELIVERIES BY RETAIL MERCHANTS

It was finally decided by the retail merchants to have three deliveries in all parts of the city each day. The deliveries will be at eight and ten o'clock in the morning and three o'clock in the afternoon.
The new system went into effect today and was favored by the retail merchants of the city. The ban on the one delivery a day was raised by the government the early part of this week.

Making Play of Work.
Making play of work is often a good idea when getting children to help.
Thus, when seeking the aid of a youngster to pick up the pins from the floor, let him or her use a horseshoe magnet for the purpose. You can get such a magnet for ten cents.

Speed of Bullet.
A rifle bullet covers about two miles in five seconds, while sound travels
the same distance in a shade more than nine and one-half seconds, so it is easy to understand why the bullet strikes before the report of the rifle is heard.

Hang the Expense!
As George folded the fair young creature to his heart a dull, cracking sound smote his ear. "Ah! It's good-by to those cigars in my vest pocket," he said grimly; "but hang the expense at a moment like this."

great benefit to the younger boys of Rock County.

Is There a Better Car Than the Ford Automobile?

If its original cost is higher—if it costs more to maintain—if its tires are higher priced—if that is the manner in which the value of a motor car is gauged, then there are better cars than the Ford automobile.

BUT, if the value of a motor car is measured by its all-around, day-in and day-out dependable service, real economy, mechanical perfection and excellent workmanship, then the Ford is the better automobile.

The public is the best judge. The average motor car buyer applies old-fashioned horse-sense to the purchase of an automobile. That is why over fifty per cent of all automobiles are Fords! That is also the reason why two-thirds of all motor car owners drive Fords.

Ford automobiles are again being built, but production has not yet attained its former great volume. To insure delivery of automobile when you need it, you MUST place your order well in advance. We have no salesmen to call upon you—sales will have to be made at our salesroom.

The Milk Way is the Health Way

That nice big glass of healthful milk brings the youngsters hustling home from school. How they enjoy milk! And bread well spread with butter—real energy food, economical and easy to get.

Cook With Milk

Housewives will find cooking with milk the inexpensive way to strengthen the food quality of the family diet.

Dr. E. V. McCollum, national food authority, says—"Milk should be put into foods as prepared. The fact that people may not care for milk as a beverage makes it imperative that they obtain milk in cooked foods. Children should be fed at least a quart of milk a day."

MILK--The Protective Food

That milk is our protective food, making good the deficiencies of other foods is a demonstrated, scientific fact.

Milk is a substitute for all foods, but for milk there is no substitute. That's why the milk way is the health way.

JANESVILLE BECOMING MECCA FOR SOLDIERS

Camp Grant Men Making City Vacation Ground When on Furloughs. Military Police Here Tomorrow.

With 30,000 soldiers at Camp Grant awaiting their discharge and more coming to the camp every day, Janesville is becoming a mecca for the khaki-clad men. Some of them come to the city to visit and see their friends, but according to the police the majority of them come in the hope of securing liquor.

For the past ten days the hotels of the city have been crowded and on two occasions during the past week it has been impossible to secure lodging in any of them. They have been packed to capacity and many soldiers and civilians were forced to sit in the lobby during the night.

Janesville is the vacation ground for the soldiers from the Rockford camp. They have spent half of their day traveling the soldiers come to Janesville on a furlough rather than go to Milwaukee or Chicago.

With the camp authorities discharging about a thousand men a day, the streets of Janesville during the evening resemble a person of a regular army town. The soldiers begin to arrive in the afternoon and continue to arrive in the city until the last car in the evening.

Seventy soldiers arrived on the 7 o'clock train last night. They had all been discharged and were hurrying to make the 7:30 train for their homes in the northern part of the state. Still more arrived during the night and every passenger train leaving Janesville for the north was crowded with the khaki-clad men.

Fully determined to stamp out the liquor traffic regarding the soldiers getting drunk in Janesville, Chief Chaplain requested a detail of military police from the Illinois commandment. The men were first in the morning on the streets and on Tuesday evening and will continue to patrol the streets each week until the demobilization at Camp Grant has been completed.

Soldiers have every respect for a military police and will never make the slightest move to disobey the orders of one. They have the power of a policeman in the hands and are in any way causing a disturbance. Military police are the guardians of law of the army and their very word must be obeyed by the men and officers.

DEFECTIVE CHIMNEY CALLS OUT DEPARTMENT

A call which called the fire department to Oliver Gibson home 725 Monroe street at noon today. A defective chimney was the cause of the blaze.

THREE DELIVERIES BY RETAIL MERCHANTS

It was finally decided by the retail merchants to have three deliveries in all parts of the city each day. The delivery will be at eight o'clock in the morning and three o'clock in the afternoon.

The new system went into effect today and was favored by the retail merchants of the city.

The one delivery a day was raised by the government the early part of this week.

OLDEST LOVE LETTER FOUND

Modern Scientist Declares It to Have Been Written About the Time of Abraham.

The oldest love letter in the world has been found—and read by eyes for which it never was intended. Dr. Stephen Herbert Langdon, Museum of Art and Sciences, University of Pennsylvania, was the man to find this tablet, written on a tablet of clay about the time of Abraham. He also has brought to life what is said to be the oldest map in existence, drawn about 1500 B. C. or another tablet of clay.

Here is the letter, which, said to relate, is partly selfish:

"To Kaka and Mirsila say:
"Thus saith Sin-mugir.
"May the Sun-dog give you good health.
"How is this business?
"For a whole month you have not sent anybody to ask about my welfare.
"Now I direct Shamashpeir unto you.
"Send me 30 plats of barley meal and ten plats of bean flour.
"I am in trouble.
"Give quickly.
"What you send deduct from your tithes.
"As to the rest, send it according to future instructions."
Evidently the writer was fond of both Kaka and Mirsila, two sisters. Although the letter could scarcely be called affectionate, as the present generation understands the word, its translator assures us that it is a bona fide cross-your-heart love letter.

The map found by Doctor Langdon was of Babylonian origin and indicates a "supposedly suburban district joined together by canals.—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

The Thirteenth Commandment

CHAPTER I.

As usual nowadays, instead of knocking at the door Fate called up on the telephone.

Though the bell shrilled almost in Mrs. Kip's ear she would not answer it. She winced, shook her head, agitated her rocking chair with petulant, embroidered vindictiveness, and hardly so much called out as sighed very loudly toward the hallway:

"Daphne! O-ho, Daphne! the telephone again!"

On the stairs there sounded a rattled scurry like the rush of an April shower chased down a hillside by the sun. An allegory of April darted across the room and raised the telephone to her lips as if it were a hen of good cheer.

Her mother was used to this humor of Daphne's and paid no heed till a sudden frost chilled the warm tone of the girl's voice. The smile of hospitality wasted on the telephone had given place to a look of embarrassment.

Mrs. Kip whispered anxiously, "Who is it?"

Daphne motioned her not to interrupt, and her voice grew deep and important. It became what her brother Bayard called her "reception voice."

In her grandest contralto she said:

"This is Miss Kip. Yes, I have. Yes, he does. I beg pardon? Oh!—Oh! Oh! How do you do, Mr. Winburn?"

"Mr. Who?" her mother keened.

Daphne whispered to quiet her, "A young man from New York—friend of Bayard's—same office. I haven't got his name yet."

Into the telephone she was saying, and bowing and nodding the while with her politest face, "Indeed I'll try to be. Of course Cleveland's not New York, but—By the way, do you dance? That's good. That's right; might as well be deaf if you don't! How long will you be in Cleveland? Oh, is that all? Well, then, you must come out here and have tea with us this very afternoon. I'll call for you at the hotel in my little car. No; it's not one of those; it's an electric. I run it myself. Afraid to risk it? Brave man! I'll be there in fifteen minutes, and you might be on the steps. Goodbye, Mr. Winburn."

This last was said in the fond tone of ancient friendship, and she hung up the receiver with a gesture like shaking hands.

She turned to find her mother thinking her lips in a long, tight line; her cheeks bulged explosively. Daphne forestalled her:

"It's a young fellow in the same firm as Bayard. Says he's here on business for ten days. Bayard told him to call me up and tell me to be nice to him. That sounds like Bay. Also said he hadn't time to write. That sounds like still. Bayard told him to kiss you for him, so he must be all right. I was going to take him to the hotel to a tea-dance, but I thought I'd better give him a look-over first. So I'll roll him out here. Get out the iced china and the napkins I mono-graphed, and—"

"But, Daphne! Wait! I can't!"

RELIEVED FROM ITCHING BURNING ECZEMA

Gives Relief to the Whole Body. Aug. 15.—"For some time I suffered frightfully from eczema on my legs. From my knees down they were covered with scales, and itched and burned as though hot coals were resting on them. I would scratch until the blood came, and was unable to sleep at night. Nothing that I tried helped me, until a druggist recommended Resinol Ointment. After applying it once, I enjoyed the first good night's sleep I had in weeks. Now I am sound and well after using a little over one jar of Resinol Ointment. It has helped me give the whole credit." (Signed) E. B. Price, 414 Downey St., Indianapolis, Ind.

"I haven't time to argue with you, mamma. Please do as I tell you for once, and don't fuss. Mr. Winburn will probably have a lot of news to tell you about your prodigal son, G'by!"

She pipped a kiss on the forehead that anxiety had turned to corduroy and ran upstairs like another April shower chasing the sun uphill. She dashed down again with hat and gloves, and, with nose repowdered, slammed the front door gayly, thrummed the steps, and strode across the long lawn to the little electric car standing under the porte cochere. The car was very large for a beetle but pretty small for an automobile.

CHAPTER II.

The night train from New York had deposited Clay Winburn in the grimy cavern of the station at an early hour. He had dawdled over his breakfast, feeling lost without his New York morning papers.

When at last it grew late enough to telephone for an appointment with the man he had come to see he was disgusted to learn that the wretch would not be visible till the next day.

It was then that Bayard Kip's parting behest to call up his sister resurfaced to Winburn. He planned to compose a formal note of self-introduction, but Bayard had forgotten to tell him his sister's name or his father's initials. There were several Kips in the telephone book, and he could not tell which would be which. He decided to call up each number and ask a maid or somebody if Mr. Bayard Kip's people lived there.

The very first number he called brought Daphne herself suddenly voice to voice with him. Voices are characters, and it was a case of love at first hearing with him. She had him smiling and cooing at the second phrase. He felt that she was going to make his stay in Cleveland pleasant.

He formed all sorts of pictures of her while he waited on the hotel steps, but when she stepped out of her car and looked about she was none of the Misses Kip he had planned. She was a round, pretty little thing, audible of eye and humorous about the lips, and cunningly dressed. She looked as if she would be a plucky, tireless sports-woman; yet she had a wistful, tender hugeness that a girl ought not to have, however well she plays tennis.

"Is this Mr.?" she began. He was too nervous to notice her pause.

He retorted, "Is this Miss Kip?" He noted that she shook hands well, with a boyish clench accompanied by an odd little duck of the head.

"Mighty nice of you to take me out this desert island," he learned.

"Mighty glad to have the privilege," she said as she verified the fraternity pin on his overcoat. "Mother is dying to hear how Bayard is."

Mothers have little power left as guardians, but the children find that the title has a certain value at times to keeping order.

"Want you get-in?" said Daphne, pointing to her car. She made him crowd in first, then followed and closed the door and pulled the throttle.

He meditated aloud: "How wonderful it really is that you should talk to me over the telephone and invite me to your home and come and get me like this."

"What's so wonderful about that?" said Daphne. "Everybody does it."

"Everything that everybody does is wonderful," said Winburn. "But how especially wonderful it is to live in a city where there are no walls about the gardens. Look! there aren't even fences. The lawns are all joined together and the houses are mostly wind-downs. Everything is so open and free, full of sunlight and frankness. You're taking me home in this charming little glass showcase to introduce me to your mother. I tell you the world do move! A woman of today has a lot to be thankful for. You ought to be mighty happy."

"Ought-to-be hasn't much to do with it," Daphne sighed. "We've got a lot to get yet—and a lot to get rid of."

He sank back discouraged. The sex was still insatiable.

After a short ride they turned into a driveway leading through a spacious expanse of grass dotted with trees and shrubs, to a homelike house without beauty or ugliness—a house that had grown with the personalities of the occupants. The only ostentations about the place were the cupola of an earlier day and the porte cochere stuck out like a broken wing.

She led him into the house and waved him toward the hall tree. When he had set down his hat and stick she led him into the drawing room.

She had not yet achieved his name.

Her mother shocked her by saying, "Delighted to meet you, Mr.—I didn't quite catch the name."

Daphne blushed for her mother's query, but was glad to overhear the stranger's answer:

"I am Mr. Winburn, Mrs. Kip—Clay Winburn."

At this moment a tall, shambling man walked in. He looked as if he looked older than he was. His spectacles overwhelmed a rather unsuccessful nose. Daphne hardly needed to introduce him as her father. She gave Winburn a name now, and he felt called upon to explain his incursion.

"I know your son Bayard very well. I'm in his office. We belong to the same fraternity—different chapters of course. We struck up a great friendship. When he knew I was coming to Cleveland he said, 'Tell my sister to be nice to you,' and—"

Winburn paused in some embarrassment before the ballroom manner of Mrs. Kip, but the pompous disguises of timidity fell from her as she murmured—and blushed in a motherly way:

"Daphne told me. He said for you to kiss his mother for him."

"Te-es."

"Well, I am his mother."

"Oh! May I?"

"Will you?"

He pressed his lips respectfully on her cheek, but she, closing her eyes to imagine him her son, flung her fat arms about him and held him a moment. He kissed her again with a kind of vicarious devotion.

"I'd want Bayard to deliver such a message to your mother," she explained.

Already Winburn was a member of the household; he had been kissed and sympathized with.

He turned to Daphne with an apologetic look and saw that she was staring at him with softer eyes than he had thought she had.

Definite anxieties engaged Mrs. Kip, for tea had come in tottering on a tray carried by a panic-stricken cook, as agile as a hippopotamus and as shy as a violet.

Daphne and her mother and father went through the tea ceremony with the anxiety of people in an earthquake, and the "Swedish dromedary" stared at the unaccustomed sight as if the tea blibbers were drinking poison and she watching for the convulsions to begin.

Clay Winburn talked altogether about Bayard and his wonderful progress in business in spite of the hard times. Bayard, he said, was sticking to his desk like a demon, and he let nothing distract him.

"It must be glorious living in New York," Daphne sighed.

"Why don't you come and pay Bayard a visit?" Winburn suggested.

"He wouldn't have time to take me anywhere, and I don't know anybody else there."

"You know me. And I'd be only too glad to try to repay your hospitality to me."

Mrs. Kip looked on and listened with the fond alarm of one who has seen fatal courtships begun with just such fencing.

When at length Daphne suggested that there was still time to rush down to the Hotel Statler for a dance or two Mrs. Kip smiled at her. Winburn did not know that he had been brought home on approval. Mrs. Kip realized that he was not to be returned as impossible. Her fancy gambled in futures.

Dinner Stories

An elderly church warden, in shaving himself at Sunday before church time, made a slight cut with the razor on the extreme end of his nose. Quickly calling his wife, he asked her if she had any court plaster in the house.

"You will find some in my sewing basket," she said. The warden soon had the cut covered.

At the church, in assisting with the collection, he noticed everyone smiling at him.

"Very much annoyed," he asked a friend if there was anything wrong with his appearance.

"Well, I should say there is," was the answer. "What's that on your nose?"

"Court plaster."

"No," said his friend, "it is the label of a spoon of cotton. It says 'Warranted 200 yards long.'"

The proprietor of a traveling menagerie had trained a lion and a lamb to live together in the same cage. The unusual sight was always well advertised beforehand, and invariably proved a big draw. Presently, however, there came a time when the attraction ceased to figure in the show and the showman was asked the reason.

"Had to separate 'em," he replied, gloomily. "Did he turn savage, then? I thought he looked such a nice old lion."

"Lion he blowed! It was the lamb. When he grew up he started butting like a battering ram. Used to knock the poor lion about something shameful."

Louise was to have her first birthday party. The guests had not arrived and her mother was instructing Louise how she must be pleasant and sweet to her little guests, and so make them have a good time. When her mother had finished, Louise said: "If they knock me down, I'll grin."

"I'm sorry," my vis-a-vis said at last, leaning forward with her chin resting on the backs of her clasped hands, "I'm sorry to be sitting in the place of some one else whom you would prefer to have here." Then she added, with a little sigh, "That is, if you would prefer some one else."

"I would and I wouldn't," I smiled.

"I am trying to imagine that you are she."

"In these—in this costume?"

"It is difficult to imagine her dressed as you are, but not impossible. I admit, though, that it would be easier to picture you in her dress than her in yours."

"Why did she not come?"

"I have displeased her."

"If she has been angry it must be that she forgot for the moment how brave you are and how kind."

"She said she never wanted to see me again."

"And you said you would never enter her house again. Yet you broke your word when she was in danger, and she was very glad to see you indeed."

"She reached across the table impulsively and laid her small brown fingers in my palm."

"What would you do in that case?"

"I'd come and find you," she answered, "and when I'd found you, I'd put my hands in yours, just like this, and I'd ask your forgiveness for being a cross, cranky old maid."

"But she isn't an old maid." I held her fingers tightly.

"She'll be twenty-five tomorrow."

"She laughed. 'And if a girl isn't married by the time she is twenty-five she is an old maid.'"

"Then she'll never be an old maid," I declared, "because by this time tomorrow she'll be married—that is," I added, "if she'll accept a stout, middle-aged man for a husband."

"There isn't one on this island," she declared, looking at me with shining eyes. "You can't claim to be stout when your belt nearly reaches around you twice. Monty," she gave my hand a quick little squeeze, "you're a dear."

"Will you marry me?" I asked.

"Of course. I decided that long ago. Do you suppose I'd let any man see me in this costume unless he was going to marry me?"

"Excuse me, folks," said a voice, "I hate like the devil to butt in on the Southern and Marlowe stuff and I certainly have enjoyed it, but I've got to make a getaway and I can't do a Brodie out of this tree without disturbing you."

We looked up at the anxious face of Kent peering between the branches.

"That revenue boat is coming back, and it's a cinch they're going to get me this time if I stick around this dinky island. I've got to beat it."

He scrambled down.

"How can you get away?" I asked.

"The launch," he explained briefly. "I've been fixing her up on the g. t. this week getting ready for an emergency. She looks good for fifteen miles an hour."

"Sixteen," corrected Lucile.

"All the better then. I'll lose 'em out there. I don't suppose you two doves will mind if I keep 'em so busy that they ain't got time to land Mr. Bopp for an hour or so." He grinned.

"Not a bit," I answered. "Good luck."

MORRIS MILLER

Jimmy Clabby, now an Anzac corporal, recently arrived in Italy with his regiment, having sailed from Sydney, N. S. W., on Oct. 15. It is probable that he will not reach the front in time to get into the fighting, as the troopship on which he sailed was due to reach the shores of Italy about the date of the signing of the armistice.

The fact that he was prevented from taking a hand in the actual fighting, of course, does not detract from the glory of the American boxer, who cast his lot with the fighting Australians. His decision to enlist with the Anzacs came about as a result of an excellent treatment accorded him by the British in the Andromeda, where he has spent so much of his time in recent years. A day or two before he boarded the transport a dinner was tendered to him by a few of his many friends in Sydney and he was presented with a wrist watch, a silver cigarette case and a wallet stuffed with bank notes.

Unless all signs fail, the Yankees will do their 1919 spring training in Florida instead of in Georgia. Since the days when Clark Griffith directed the work of the Yankees on the old Fulton grounds Georgia has been the favorite state for this team's training. In sixteen years no less than thirteen Yankee teams have been taken to the Peach state for spring training. These, Wolverton, Donovan and Huggins have taken their teams to Georgia, the list of training cities including Atlanta, Augusta, Athens and Macon.

Two years ago the owners of the New York club fitted up a clubhouse close to the Macon park and it is barely possible that the team might have been there next spring, but on negotiations otherwise. Under a contract signed in 1916 the New York club has a refusal of the Macon park for training each spring for a period of five years, but must give a definite answer before Dec. 31, preceding. It is thought that Huggins will decide in favor of a return to Macon. The hotel accommodations are good, the ball park leaves little to be desired, but the Yankee leader is inclined to favor a warmer climate for training his ball tossers. He looks with favor on Florida and it is likely that the Yankee will go there. Three or four cities are under consideration at this time, but the final decision will not be made until early in the new year. While managing the Cardinals Huggins always trained at San Antonio and the weather which his club encountered at Macon last spring was of a somewhat cooler brand than he had been accustomed to get for the early training.

Jesse Winters, the promising kid pitcher who reported to John McGraw at Martin last April and to the military authorities in May, writes that some weeks prior to the signing of the armistice he received a commission as second lieutenant of Infantry. He is at present stationed at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, but expects to be mustered out of the service within a short time.

Winters, who before the war put in much of his time punching cattle on his father's ranch near San Antonio, Tex., is a graduate of Simmons college at Abilene, and was pronounced a good pitcher by him since Christy Mathewson was a kid.

"Snowy" Baker, the Australian sport impressionist, sailed from San Francisco recently, homeward bound. Baker had been in this country for several months and originally intended to remain here indefinitely, but the ending of the war prompted him to return to Australia for the purpose of promoting a series of championship matches. He has made tempting offers to many American boxers in the past, and also has cabled to George Carpentier and Jimmy Wilde begging them to make the journey to the Island Continent.

Tales of the Friendly Forest

BY DAVE CONY

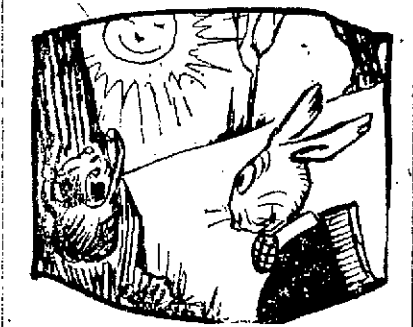

The Gentle South Wind in the trees is turning buds to tender leaves, and down the crystal babbling brook.

The Pussy Willows nod and look to see if over the meadow green the Dandelions can be seen. Soon all the flowers will be here and Chilly Winter disappear.

Billy Bunny hopped up to the big hollow tree where Mistah Possum and Mrs. Possum had slept all winter with their little baby possums. "Come out, come out, Spring is here!"

"What's that?" asked Mistah Possum, sleepily. "Who's calling?"

"It's me, Billy Bunny," laughed the little rabbit. "Mr. Happy Sun is right and warm, and the Pussy Willows are playing with the Cattails by the Babbling Brook." And then away hopped the little rabbit, for he couldn't wait another minute, he was so anxious to spread the good news. And pretty soon he came to Woody Chuck's front door, and called "through the keyhole, 'Spring is coming, wake up, wake up!'" And Woody Chuck yawned and stretched his legs, and pretty soon he opened the door, but the little rabbit wasn't there. No, sirre. He was far away waking up Billy Badger. And after that he hopped over to stir up Timmy Chipmunk and Petter Coon. Dear me, that little rabbit was busy, let me tell you. He just couldn't let anybody find out the good news for himself. Billy Bunny wanted to be the spring's little messenger boy.

And all the time the little Balmie Breezes were dancing here and there, ringing the blue bells and blowing on the little horn-shaped flowers and whispering to the grasses and the ferns.

And Mr. Happy Sun kept smiling and smiling away up in his big blue sky.

Cold Mr. North Wind had gone up to the North Pole to whistle to his snow horses and to tell Santa Claus's reindeer that everybody had forgotten all about Xmas trees, and that Robbie Redbreast was building a nest in the old apple tree close by the Big Red Barn.

And, goodness me! I've almost forgotten to mention that the Weathercock had a new suit of gold paint. Yes, sir. The good natured farmer had climbed up on a ladder with a little bottle of gold paint and a brush and the Weathercock was as bright as a new gold dollar.

Down at the Old Brier Patch Mrs. Bunny was getting ready for house cleaning. The Old Red Rooster had been hired to take down the storm door and store it away in the barn. And after that he had been told to take the straw wrappers off the rose bushes and the pile of dry leaves from the cellar doors. He was as busy as could be, for Mrs. Bunny kept her eye on him and he didn't even have time to crow, except at 2 o'clock in the morning, when everybody was in bed. And in the next story you shall hear more about Billy Bunny and his friends as Gentle Spring makes Old Mother Earth smile and blossoms once again.

The Refugee

By VICTORIA MAPLETON

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

Jabez Hull was never happy unless he was trying into the business of other people. Gossip was his life, giving advice a habit, bossing things the height of his life. He had tried his arts on his half cousin, Mrs. Winsted, and her daughter, Dorothy, but had been promptly squelched. They despised his mean, interfering nature and he got to realize it and rarely visited them.

Alek Deury, also a cousin of Mrs. Winsted, was just the reverse. He was gentle hearted, full of quixotic ideas and deemed it a favor and a blessing to be near Mrs. Winsted and Dorothy. He was rheumatic, and in certain weather got about with difficulty. The widow had fixed up a little two-room cottage at the rear of the lot for Alek, and there he lived.

One evening a cold rain caused him to hurry in crossing the 300-foot space between the two houses. Suddenly he stumbled over an obstacle in his path and went headlong.

"Gracious!" exclaimed Alek. "It's a man!" He knelt by the side of the prostrate figure, to make out that the insensible stranger was a convict in the garb of the convicts at the penitentiary, 20 miles away.

"Now what am I ever to do?" he so thought. "He's soaked through, his face is bleeding. He is either stunned or sick. I suppose my duty is to call the authorities, and there's a standing reward of $100 for the return of an escaped convict. Four fellow! He probably has no home, no friends. Well, I'll be one to him, for tonight, anyhow."

Alek carried the stranger bodily to the little old cottage. He began to shiver and talk disjunctively. Alek removed his wet clothing and got him to bed. He was in a raging fever and delirious by daylight.

"He must be a convict," reflected Alek, for when he went out into the garden a neighbor informed him that a man had escaped from the prison the night previous.

Alek bundled up the convict garb and hid it away. He told Mrs. Winsted of a charge, ill and friendless. Mrs. Winsted administered some homely remedies and Dorothy brought some delicacies. She was greatly drawn to the helpless, handsome looking stranger, whose ravings, vague as they were, betokened intelligence and good breeding.

For nine days the sick man lay in fever and stupor most of the time. Dorothy would relieve Alek while he attended to his garden chores, and would sit at the couch fanning the patient or playing cold bandages on his head.

"Confin' Mary," spoke Alek one morning, near a shivering hedge. "I've got to reveal a secret to you," and he narrated the details of his discovery of the stranger.

"A convict?" shuddered Mrs. Winsted.

"Yes, cousin," replied Alek, "and because of that fact and because I have observed that Dorothy is getting deeply interested in him, I want you to help me in some plan to get him away from here."

"Let's think it over," said Mrs. Winsted, quite subdued. "There was a rattle on the other side of the hedge, and eavesdropping Jabez Hull started at a fast gallop for the town."

He returned in an hour. Dorothy gently talking to the convalescent, was surprised as Jabez burst into the room, followed by an officer.

"There's the convict, and see that I got my hundred dollars," cried the avaricious Jabez.

"Shame on you!" burst forth from Dorothy. "At least be human enough to spare a very sick man a shock that might kill him."

"Why, I think I understand," spoke the invalid, weakly, but with earnestness. "I was just about to explain to my kind nurse here how I came to be a burden to herself and her friends. The convict you take me for met me some distance from here, and at the point of a pistol forced me to change clothes with him. I told him to get out of the storm, and I remember little since. I am Willis Thorne, and the son of Senator Thorne of Rushville."

"Why, he's the millionaire manufacturer's son!" exclaimed Jabez, sneaking from the house.

"We will inform your relatives that you are here, and safe," suggested Alek.

"Yes, but I don't think I had better be moved until I feel strong and well again—do you?"

Dorothy flushed pink at the expression in those questioning eyes, grateful and tender at the same time. Alek retired with a chuckle.

"I wasn't wrong," he told himself gleefully. "I never was in love in my life, but those two—well, may they be happy all their lives!"

Journalistic Humor.

A New York newspaper referred to a distinguished visitor as a papal chambermaid instead of a papal chamberlain and the copy reader is happy that there is no firing squad for the wielder of the blue pencil. Another Park Row journal had a copy reader who changed "papal bull" to "papal error," just as he explained it, "to comply with the office rule against slang."

The Prehistoric Buffalo.

A huge buffalo with enormous horns is conspicuous in prehistoric rock drawings lately found in Algeria. The African elephant is also a striking feature, and other animals include the lion, leopard, gazelle and domestic goats and sheep.

SIDE TALKS

THE DANGERS OF PEACE.

It was at the breakfast table on the morning of the day that the bells rang out from every steeple in town to tell us of peace and victory. A dozen of us had gotten up early to help ring those bells and were breakfasting together.

"Well," said one woman, drawing a long breath of satisfaction, "now I suppose we can let up on all this conservation and war work."

I imagine that this sentiment was echoed at many thousands of breakfast tables all over the country. And I hope that in just as many thousands the quietest was given it as promptly as it was at our breakfast table.

We are unquestionably facing a danger today. We are facing a danger which is a chance to give less. The morning after our false peace announcement I heard another woman say of the big drive for the United States War Work Fund, "Well, they won't need so much money if the war is over." As if the men didn't need looking after in the days of relaxation and monotony!

Even before that a woman prominent in Red Cross work told me that one local manager after another was reporting to her a let-up in activities because people felt that the end was so near. (Last night I heard of a knitting headquarters where the call came for a thousand sweaters. And they hadn't but twelve. The inevitable sequel of course.)

And yesterday I heard a woman say, "Well we don't need to worry about saving our money for bonds any more." Evidently she did not know that one of the largest bond issues of the civil war was the one floated to carry the expense of returning the men to civilian life.

This is a Period of Let-Down.

Our danger today is of course the danger of relaxation and reaction. We have been keyed up to great effort. We have been spurred on by the feeling that no sacrifice, no effort, was too great if it helped bring peace and victory.

And now that we have them within our grasp there is the danger of a let-down to more than the inertia, more than the self-centredness of pre-war days.

And we cannot possibly afford such a let-down yet, if ever.

Suppose a captain should bring his ship into sight of harbor and would say then, "What need to keep watch or to steer any more? The harbor is in view."

Honor to Whom Honor Is Due. Because, we glimpse, or hope, we glimpse, the harbor of pre-war conditions, of world stability and peace, is any time to let the ship drift?

It is harder, I grant you, to keep to the many tasks that have yet to be done than when we had the stimuli and exhortations of war. There will be fewer capable of doing that. But all honor to those few. They will deserve the laurels if any men and women ever did.

RUPERT HUGHES

One of the Most Popular
of American Authors

At first glance Mr. Hughes might be taken as a man who has chosen an army career. He is not deceived, however. The uniform only signifies the patriotism of Rupert Hughes, who served as a captain in the intelligence department of the government during the war. It might be added that he is also a veteran of the Spanish-American war, enlisting as a private and coming out as a captain.

But Rupert Hughes' chief claim to fame is as a writer of fiction and plays, being the author of some 20 odd books and a dozen plays. His stories have won for him a place among the most popular and successful writers of the day. One of the best of his stories is "The Thirteenth Commandment," a remarkably entertaining tale of modern life. We have secured this story for our next serial and if you will read the first installment you'll surely want to follow it to the end. And, what is more, you won't regret it. The first installment of this story will be found on page ten. Don't miss it.

Pare and slice the eggplant; cut it into half-inch cubes; soak in cold salted water for half an hour, and drain. Mix with the onion, crumbs and seasonings and put in a greased baking dish; mix the milk and oil and pour over all. Bake for about one hour in a moderate oven.

Nut Loaf—Wash and soak one pint of small dried lima beans over night. In the morning cover with fresh water, bring to a boil, drain, cover with fresh boiling water and cook until tender. Put one pint of shell, roasted peanuts through the meat grinder, mix with the bean pulp and add half a pint of stale bread crumbs, one teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of paprika, one teaspoonful of onion juice and the same of bacon dripping. Pack into a square mold that has been oiled, and when formed loosen and turn out on a baking pan. Turn over with a hot oven egg and bake in a moderate oven for 30 minutes.

Oaten and Corn Flour Cake—Separate four eggs and beat yolks until thick and lemon-colored. Peanut Flour Biscuits—Mix and sift one cup cornmeal, one cup peanut flour, two cups sifted salt, one cup flour and six tablespoonfuls baking powder. Cut in five tablespoonfuls of shortening and add about one cup liquid or enough to mix to a dough. Turn on a lightly floured board, roll, cut, and bake in a rather hot oven.

TRY THESE.

When Making Candy you can use popcorn instead of nuts. This is a great saving and is very delicious.

To Prevent Irons from sticking to starched clothes and to make the iron smooth, place some salt on a paper on a flat surface and rub the iron on it occasionally.

To Take the Odor of cabbage, fish or onions from the house, burn a bit of sugar on the stove.

Window Ventilators—Hem pieces of unbleached muslin the desired size and sew on each four corners largest size dress snaps or hooks, sewing other part of snap or eye to piece of tape. Tack tape to window frame and sash. This can be taken off and washed same as curtains; only takes a minute to put on.

Use a Small chamolis skin to wash windows, mirrors and framed pictures. Wring the chamolis and dry the glass. This leaves a clean, glossy appearance and saves much time and labor.

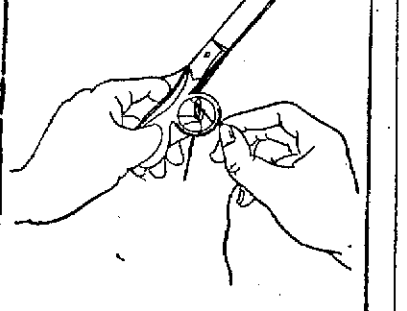

A Cheap and Practical Time Saver in washing paint or floors is a cheap sponge used instead of a cloth. It takes in the moisture and dries the wood quickly.

A Good Way to Make the Kitchen Clean and attractive looking is to paste on the wash tubs white oilcloth, using a paste of boiled flour and water.

LENS ON THE SCISSORS

To Facilitate the Operation of Threading the Needle.

A pair of scissors with a magnifying glass mounted upon their frame enables the feeble-sighted sewer to readily accomplish the threading of the needle when otherwise the task might be a difficult or impossible one.

Magnifying Glass on the Scissors. one. For doing this the scissors are grasped in the left hand much in the same way as when held for cutting by the right hand. The needle is held between the thumb and forefinger of the left hand also, and in this position it is a simple matter to see the eye of the needle through the glass. And to effect the threading operation.

THE TOWNSEND OIL TRACTOR

The Most Thoroughly Developed and Tried Out Tractor On the Market Today

The Tractor with the Gibraltar frame and big radiator, a patented feature used exclusively in the Townsend Tractor and is selling them all over the world, when others have failed due to the lack of cooling capacity and a durable foundation.

If you are in the market for a real tractor, a tractor that is a real tractor, through and through, you cannot afford to pass up The Townsend without a thorough investigation.

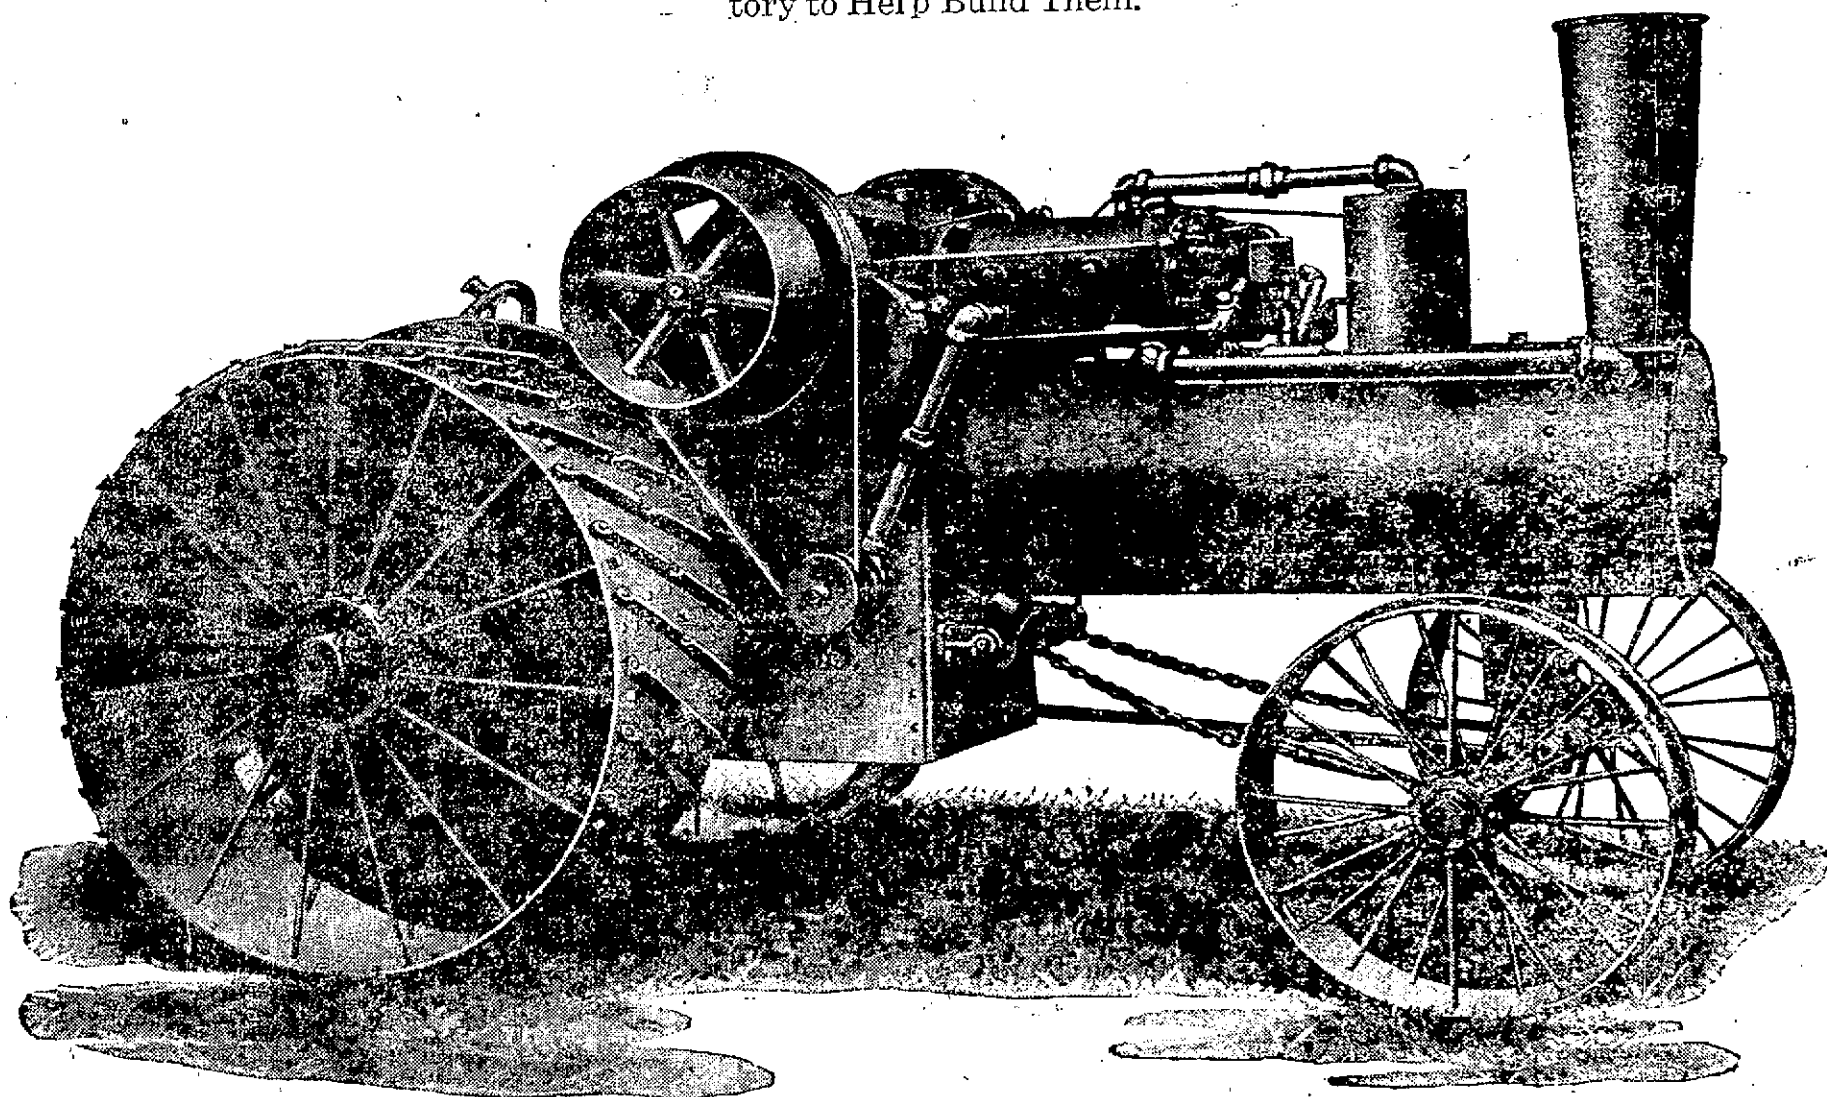

We give especial attention to farmers who had costly experience with cheaply constructed tractors. Come in and measure up our drive wheels, shafts, bearings, gears, etc. You will find they were not designed to accommodate rapid production. Our factory facilities are for real substantial business which will enable us to turn out a tractor that we can protect to the business farmer with a 5-year guarantee.

This Tractor is Now Catching the Eye of Mechanics, Who Are Applying Every Day For Positions in our Factory to Help Build Them.

Can you pick out a possible weak point? Note how the engine base is surrounded by the heavy boiler plate, making up the entire frame.

There is no chance for the engine and gears to get out of line. No growling gears in this tractor.

We eliminate excess weight through clever combinations in the various features and general simplicity.

There are only two gears and two pinions in action while plowing. Did you ever see a more powerful or neater looking outfit?

Just Plain Common Sense--Proving a Winner Everywhere

Note the extreme simplicity in construction and exceedingly small number of parts. What few there are are rugged and durable. Our repair department is never very busy.

Does It Burn Oil?

Yes. There is no gasoline tank on it. Ordinary kerosene is a treat for this motor, it burns it right during any kind of weather, and under any kind of a load. Why shouldn't it? All its internal organs were originally designed to burn kerosene. Horses were originally arranged to live on hay, etc., but your dentist could not fit you up to do the same. To our men who have had from 10 to 25 years experience designing, building and testing oil burning engines of all kinds it appears just about as easy as it would be to fit up an ordinary gasoline motor to properly handle low grade fuel oil, which is the coming source of the unlimited amount of mechanical power now in demand for agricultural purposes. This essential patented feature in the Townsend is original, has been perfected and tried for years in the hands of ordinary users with results superior to all other makes.

Those acquainted with the Townsend Manufacturing Company know that it is controlled by practical men who know the results when a farmer unknowingly depends on a tractor yet in the experimental stage, and further that nothing but time will prove tractor's reliability. This explains the conservative methods employed by the Townsends up to the present time and the fact that far more attention has been given to the careful development and perfection of their product than to rapid promotion of the industry. But now they have reached the limit in that respect and material conditions are becoming more favorable, so they will start in earnest to supply tractors for the hundreds of waiting customers who already have placed their orders.

Buy your tractor now from a company that knows what their tractor will be called upon to do, what it can do and how to make it so that it will do the work.

Farmers living in Rock and adjacent counties are fortunate in having a tractor factory right at their doors, so that should spare parts ever be needed they will be obtainable quickly and without the loss of valuable time.

If you are interested in tractors or tractor farming we have prepared an interesting booklet and will gladly mail it to you if you mail us the attached coupon filled out with your name and address.
